Being "tried in the fire" is a process we usually think of in terms of the growing Christian experience of God's people. It is understood that the trials and challenges of life can teach us patience and help to take the rough edges off of our characters. This is part four of a seven-part study on the true

Its much easier on the offset, just " smoke " the steak to 110, then move to the cowboy grate in the firebox to sear over a wood fire. Nothin like a wood fire. In the past I've used my Kettle and my gasser with a cast iron griddle to sear, its pretty easy to have it fired up and up to temp by the time the steak is ready to sear.

To do a reverse sear on charcoal you have to light the fire and then use up the best and most hottest minutes of the coals cooking indirect, then try to sear it over the coals when they've burned half out. The whole idea just has never made any sense to me. Plus, I've been grilling steaks for years with the sear first, then to temp indirect.

There will always be some flaring and spitting when you are searing a piece of meat. You want the meat to brown, after all! But this browning doesn't need to happen all at once; you can cook it for a few minutes (4 or 5 at least) on each side over medium-high heat to get the color you want.
